Editor's Notes

By Shelly Booth Cooley, Esq.

In our first feature, by Katherine L. Provost and myself, we provide summaries of the bills that were passed in the 76th legislative session. Our second and third features, by Mark E. Sullivan, outline the process necessary to obtain military health and education records, as well as a "Fact Sheet" regarding VA Payments and Family Support. Our fourth feature, by Bruce I. Shapiro, discusses alimony and provides suggestions for the court to adopt so that practitioners may reasonably predict spousal support awards.

Family Law Conference:

The Family Law Conference is scheduled for March 1 through 2, 2012, in Ely, Nevada. The theme of this year's conference is "When Custody Gets Dirty: High Conflict Custody Cases and Evidence." As always, there will be several interesting sessions on topics such as the complexities of custody, better ways to present your custody case and ethics and very hard choices in evidence, as well as some fun, extra-curricular activities.

The conference will take place at the Bristlecone Convention Center in Ely, and registration is still open. Visit the CLE live seminars page to learn more about the conference or to register!

A.B. 350 – NRS 432B Jurisdiction of Children Over Age 18

- Effective May 18, 2011
- Revises NRS 424.013

Allows a juvenile court to retain jurisdiction over a child who turns 18 years of age while in the custody of the court if the child is not likely to be returned to his or her parents and the child requests an extension of jurisdiction. The child must be offered pro bono legal services upon reaching 17 years of age to be advised of the consequences of remaining under jurisdiction. The agency responsible for providing child welfare services is also required to meet with the child before the child reaches 18 years of age to determine if the child wants to remain under jurisdiction and develop a transition plan toward independent living.

If the child chooses to remain under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, the child shall enter into a written agreement with the child welfare agency to be filed with the court. The child under jurisdiction would still be eligible to receive monetary payments from the child welfare agency in the form of a payment not to exceed the rate of payment for foster care.

Termination of the jurisdiction would occur when the child turns 21 years of age, or if other conditions are met prior to that date. The bill also prescribes the process for terminating jurisdiction, which includes providing an opportunity for the child, the child welfare agency, and the child's attorney to attempt to resolve differences prior to requesting a hearing before a court. The child welfare agency must notify the juvenile court if the jurisdiction will be terminated.

Establishes an order of priority for placing a child in protective custody.

S.B. 57 – Pick-Up Orders for Abducted Children

- Effective July 1, 2011
- Revises NRS 432

Authorizes the Children's Advocate (through the Office of Advocate for Missing or Exploited Children within the Office of the Attorney General) or his or her designee to apply to a court for a warrant to take physical custody of a child if, during an investigation, it appears that probable cause exists to believe a child located in Nevada has been abducted and the act was not committed to protect the child from abuse or the person who abducted the child from domestic violence. If the court determines no exigent circumstances exist, the bill authorized the court to issue the warrant after holding a hearing. If the court finds that exigent circumstances exist, the court may issue the warrant after an ex parte hearing, in which case the court must give the person or persons alleged to have abducted the child and having possession of the child, is different, to be heard at the earliest possible time and within 48 hours if possible.

Directs the court to assume temporary emergency jurisdiction and issue a temporary emergency custody order if the court finds, by a preponderance of the evidence presented at a hearing, that the act of abduction was committed to protect the child or the person who abducted the child. No filing fee may be charged for an application for a warrant and the court must expedite the application. The Children's Advocate acts on behalf of the court, not a party.

S.B. 371 – Psychiatric Care for Children

- Effective October 1, 2011
- Revises NRS 432B

Requires court appointment of a legally responsible person for the psychiatric care of a child in the custody of a child welfare agency, and such person shall make decisions concerning services, treatment, and psychotropic medication provided to the child. The child welfare agency shall nominate a person to be legally responsible for the psychiatric care although the court with jurisdiction shall make the appointment. The legally responsible person must provide written consent or denial for routine treatment of psychiatric care and notify the parent, legal guardian or child welfare agency.

The legally responsible person must approve or deny the administration of psychotropic medication and prohibits the administration without consent from the legally responsible person. The measure prescribes the circumstances in which a child may receive psychotropic medication without the approval of the legally responsible person, including cases of emergency. The bill requires certain health care providers to obtain written consent for the legally responsible person before providing psychiatric care to a child in the custody of a child welfare agency and the provider must keep a copy of the consent in the child's health care records.

Child Custody

A.B. 313 – Parents In Military

- Effective October 1, 2011
- Revises NRS 125.510

Limits modification of custody orders based on a parent's actual or potential military deployment (including temporary duty) and authorizes temporary modifications in order to accommodate deployment of a parent. Applies to families where one or both parents are members of the military (armed forces of the United States, a reserve component thereof or the National Guard). The court may hold expedited hearings and allow testimony by affidavit or electronic means for a parent whose ability or anticipated ability to appear in person at a regularly scheduled custody or visitation hearing is materially affected by his or her military duties.

If military duties preclude adjudication of custody orders prior to deployment, parents are required to cooperate to reach a mutually agreeable resolution to the issues. If the court has issued a temporary custody order, the bill deems the absence of a child from Nevada during a deployment to be temporary.

- Effective July 1, 2011
- Revises NRS 432B

Requires the Department of Health and Human Services to establish and administer the Kinship Guardianship Assistance Program in accordance with federal law to provide assistance to a relative of a child who is seeking appointment as the legal guardian of the child under certain circumstances. GETTING MILITARY HEALTH AND EDUCATION RECORDS

*by Mark E. Sullivan

Obtaining Documents from the Government

When requesting government records, remember that personnel records are governed by the Privacy Act of 1974. Be prepared to jump over some hurdles to get what you want, and don't expect results overnight. When requesting personnel records, you will usually need to obtain consent of the individual concerned or else an order from a court of competent jurisdiction. This order could be a subpoena, but it still must be signed by a judge, and it is recommended that the records be returnable to the court.

An example that the author used in a custody case (with fictitious names and other information) is found in Attachment A. This is a motion to obtain Department of the Navy disciplinary and investigative records, along with a subpoena and a letter to the Office of General Counsel, Department of the Navy. All these documents were prepared pursuant to the regulations cited therein and with unofficial guidance by a command judge advocate at the installation involved, who knew the contents of the records and was willing to point out what needed to be done to obtain their release. Despite all these precautions, the Navy denied the request and directed the author to federal court if he wanted to challenge the ruling! Based on this experience, the author cautions that one should not assume that every document request, even when done properly, will result in compliance; some cases are just too sensitive for release of their documents to a court in a divorce case without the intervention of a federal district court judge, which most clients cannot afford.

The Department of Defense has established its own regulations, pursuant to the Act and to DoD Directive 5400.11, and this privacy publication is set out in "Department of Defense Privacy Program," DoD 5400.11-R (May 14, 2007). You can find the directives, publications, administrative instructions, memoranda, and forms you need from the "DoD Issuances" website, located at http://www.dtic.mil/whs/directives/. As an agency of DoD, the Defense Finance and Accounting Service is bound by these rules. The specific rules that DFAS has promulgated regarding release of information are found at DoD Financial Management Regulation, Volume 7B, Chapter 18, "Release of Information," which contains specific references to the regulations of each of the DoD branches of service. The DoDFMR can be found at http://comptroller.defense.gov/fmr. Rules for the Coast Guard, an agency of the Department of Homeland Security, are found at the CG-61 Reference Guide, published by the USCG Office of Information Management. Go to www.uscg.mil and type "CG-61 Reference Guide" into the SEARCH window. Extensive information about release of information from the Coast Guard may be found at the USCG's Freedom of Information & Privacy Act website located at http://www.uscg.mil/foia.

In addition to income documents, such as Retiree Account Statements and Leave and Earnings Statements, attorneys often need to see the discharge form of servicemembers to determine years of creditable service. The Military veterans and the next of kin of deceased former military members may now use a new online military personnel records system to request documents. Other individuals with a need for documents must still complete the Standard Form 180, which can be downloaded from the online website. Because the requester will be asked to supply all information essential for NPRC to process the request, delays that normally occur when NPRC has to ask veterans for additional information will be minimized. The new web-based application was designed to provide better service on these requests by eliminating the records center's mailroom processing time.

Medical and School Records

In many domestic cases involving one or both parents who are in the armed forces, it may be necessary to obtain school and medical records of the children involved. Far from being a minefield, as most civilian practitioners suspect, the procedures for access to military educational and health records are simple and straightforward.

Obtaining Health Records

Obtaining health records sometimes is necessary in a custody case. There is nothing unique about obtaining medical information from a military medical treatment facility (MTF), as opposed to a civilian facility; both are governed by HIPAA when the disclosure is voluntary. The primary legal and regulatory references pertaining to the release of medical information are the following:

- Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), 42 U.S.C. §§ 1320d–1320d-8 (1996);
- DoD Reg. 6025.18-R, DoD Health Information Privacy Regulation and DoD Directive 5405.2; and
- AR (Army Regulation) 40-400, Patient Administration, AR 40-66, Medical Record Administration and Health Care Administration and AR 27-40, Litigation.

The references in #3 above are for cases involving U.S. Army records.

Perry Wadsworth, a hospital attorney for Womack Army Medical Center at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, and an Army Reserve JAG Lieutenant Colonel,[1] describes the records access issues as follows:

The old "Privacy Act versus FOIA" analysis used to be one of our standards for determining release of medical information, but HIPAA is now the most controlling Federal legal authority. The law was not written for the military per se; this has caused some confusion in its application, particularly because military functions and command authority are fairly broad-based in comparison to civilian institutions. One key distinction between the Privacy Act and HIPAA analyses is that health information survives the death of the patient. The protections afforded by the Privacy Act for information typically do not survive the death of the subject.

Requesting records from a military treatment facility (MTF) can be both easy and hard. The request is easy, but getting the records is sometimes hard. The spectrum, from easy to hard, is summarized as follows:

> Easy. If the patient is requesting the records himself or completes a HIPAA release form giving authority to someone else to get the records, then the request is straightforward. The MTF will release copies of the records in the normal course of business. This is the preferred method. If an attorney is representing a client whose records are needed, then he can simply have the client complete the appropriate release form with the HIPAA language. The attorney then mails the request and release form to "Medical Correspondence, Patient Administration Division, ___MTF." If the case involves a tort action, it may behoove the attorney to state the purpose of the request, such as the case "involves a motor vehicle accident," or the case "involves a potential federal tort claim." If the government has an interest in the case, whether it is the opportunity to recover money for the treatment it provided or it is likely to be accused of a tort, then the case can flow more smoothly through a forthright request. If you have points of

contact in the JAG claims office, they can usually assist you in getting the records in these cases because they have an interest in obtaining the records as well.[2]

Moderately Easy. When litigation is involved and the judge signs an order or a subpoena for the release of records, the release process is relatively easy. Attorneys for the patient or party opponent often make it difficult by not getting a judge's signature on the subpoena or order. They frequently issue subpoenas in their own names. This makes it more difficult and delays the whole process, because the MTF will contact its servicing JAG office, and the request for records will be denied. Private attorneys do not have subpoena powers over federally maintained records. The other factor that most commonly causes a denial or delay of the release is the failure to make a timely request. An Army facility needs to get the judge's order or subpoena at least 14 days in advance of the date the materials are due. AR 27-40 details this from the Army's perspective.

Hard. Whether litigation is involved or not, when there is no judge's order and no release authorization signed by a proper representative, the analysis becomes more nuanced. We then have to look to exceptions under HIPAA and implementing agency regulations for release of medical information. Child custody disputes seem to bring out the worst case scenarios. Other common examples include criminal investigations or social service involvement (e.g., child abuse) or command-directed mental health evaluations. The main reason these types of cases can be more complicated is because often there is one party who does not want the records released; yet, the requesting party argues that some other interest is more compelling than the individual's right to privacy, such as the best interest of a child, a government investigation, or the need for justice.[3] An MTF may choose to honor the request, but if legal grounds exist to release PHI (Protected Health Information), the requestor's desire to restrict the release of his health information is not ultimately dispositive.

The constraints on release of medical information also apply to conversations with or testimony of health care providers, not just the release of medical records. Some attorneys would like to get information directly from the physicians as a back-door approach to avoid requesting the records. Unfortunately, this can backfire on the attorneys. If or when the physician mentions it to his legal counsel (the JAG officer or federal attorney representing the MTF), he or she will be reminded of the rules of release and may be hesitant to cooperate in the future. AR 27-40 provides a great deal of leeway in allowing a military command (through its attorney) to determine whether a physician can provide testimony and, if so, what the limits of that testimony will be. Overall, it is better for attorneys and patients to be candid and honest about their intentions in a case. Most of them are, but there are exceptions. It leaves a bad taste in one's mouth and decreases the spirit of cooperation that might otherwise prevail. For example, I've seen doctors who were willing to bend over backwards just a few days before their deployment or change of duty station or discharge from service to provide testimony or talk to an attorney about the patient – even if they had not received timely notice. This is because they cared about their patients and the patients' attorneys were fully honest about the type of testimony they were seeking. If the providers had felt they were being tricked or misled by the patient or his/her attorney, then they would not have assisted in the legal aspects of the case. There are also patients who doggedly pursued their doctors to take sides in custody disputes or domestic cases. Rather than asking the doctor to help in providing factual information to assist in the determination of the child's best interest, these patients only succeeded in killing any interest that the doctor had to help out. In such situations, a doctor may use any excuse available, including technical regulatory excuses, to avoid testifying.

Note that some medical information related to children may not be protected by HIPAA if it is in the school system records. The release of this information is covered under The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 USC § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99.).[4]

It is helpful to have a copy of 32 CFR §§ 516.40-46 for information on Army litigation policies regarding the release of information. Briefly summarized, this regulation provides as follows:

> Except as provided in the regulation, Department of the Army (DA) personnel will not disclose official information in response to subpoenas, court orders, or requests.

The appropriate legal authority (e.g., staff judge advocate or hospital legal advisor) must approve in writing the release of information.

If DA personnel receive a subpoena, court order, or request for attendance at a trial, deposition, or interview that reasonably might require disclosure of official information, they should immediately contact the appropriate legal authority, who will attempt to satisfy the subpoena, order, or request informally under the regulation or will consult with the Litigation Division, Headquarters, Department of the Army.

Those who seek official information must submit at least 14 days before the desired date of production a specific written request setting out the nature and relevance of the official information sought, and DA personnel may only disclose those matters specified in writing and approved by the appropriate legal authority.[5]

DA personnel will not release originals; only authenticated copies will be provided when disclosure is authorized.

AR 37-60 provides a schedule of fees and charges for searching, copying, and certifying Army records for release in response to litigation-related requests.

If the request complies with the regulation, it is DA policy to make the information available for use in court unless the information is classified, privileged, or otherwise restricted from public disclosure.

There are a number of factors that must be considered in determining whether to release information; such factors are found at 32 CFR § 516.44(b)

If the deciding official determines that all or part of the requested documents or information shall not be disclosed, then the official will promptly communicate directly with the attorney who requested the documents or information to attempt to resolve the matter informally. If the order or subpoena is invalid, the official should explain to the attorney why it is invalid and why the records requested are privileged from release. The official should try to obtain the attorney's agreement to withdraw or modify the subpoena, order, or request.

A subpoena duces tecum or other legal process signed by an attorney or a clerk for DA records protected by the Privacy Act, 5 USC § 552a, does not justify the release of the protected records. The deciding official should explain to the requester that the Act precludes the release of such records without the written consent of the individual involved or "pursuant to the order of a court of competent jurisdiction."[6] Such an order is one signed by a judge or magistrate.

If the records are unclassified and are otherwise privileged from release under 5 USC § 552a, they may be released to the court if there is an order signed by a judge or magistrate directing the person to whom the records pertain to release the specific records, or that orders copies of the records to be delivered to the clerk of court and indicates that the court has determined the materiality of the records and the absence of a claim of privilege. The clerk must be empowered to receive the records under seal subject to a request that they be withheld from the parties until the court determines whether they are material to the issues and until any question of privilege is resolved.

A subpoena or court order for alcohol abuse or drug abuse treatment records is processed under 42 USC §§ 290dd-3 and 290ee-3 and Public Health Service regulations published at 42 CFR. §§ 2.1–2.67.

The HIPAA Privacy and Security Rules are implemented within the Military Health System (MHS) by DoD 6025.18-R, "Department of Defense Health Information Privacy Regulation," January 24, 2003, and DoD 8580.02-R, "Department of Defense Health Information Security Regulation," July 12, 2007. The final rule on Standards for Privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information, published by the Department of Health and Human Services, is found at 45 CFR Parts 160 and 164.

Obtaining Educational Records

Many on-base primary and secondary schools for military dependent children are run by the Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA). The schools operated by DoDEA in the United States are known as the Defense Dependents Elementary and Secondary Schools (DDESS) and the schools operated overseas are known as the Department of Defense Dependents Schools (DoDDS). As in non-DoDEA schools, parents of children under age 18 have the right to access and review the school records of their children enrolled at such facilities (including academic records, disciplinary files, and other student information). These records are available to a parent or legal guardian without regard to who has custody of the child, unless the decree of divorce or dissolution or the court-approved parenting plan (including a custody order) requires that records access be denied or denies the non-custodial parent access to the child. The requesting parent must be prepared to produce documentation to establish that he or she is the child's parent. The documentation required is the same as that described below when the parent is requesting a copy of the records by mail.

If a child is presently in a non-DoDEA school (e.g., private school, charter school, or public school), the records from previous DoDEA schools will not be in the child's educational records folder unless a parent copied the records and brought them to the non-DoDEA school or unless that school, with the consent of a parent, requested the DoDEA records from a previous DoDEA school. Under the Privacy Act, a non-DoDEA school cannot request prior military school records without a parental consent form accompanying the school's request. Conversely, on-base schools may, and usually do, require previous non-DoDEA schools to copy and produce the child's records for inclusion in the child's DoDEA educational records folder.

If a parent is not located near the school where a child is enrolled, he or she may request that a DoDEA school copy and mail the child's records. A copy of the "systems notice" governing student educational records is found at Appendix B. The systems notice identifies the records that the school maintains on children, the disposition of those records, and the address to which one mails a request for copies of student records. The request for student records is made under the Privacy Act of 1974, as amended. Below is a description of the information that a parent must be prepared to provide if he or she is close to the school, or that the parent must include in a written request sent by mail:

REQUEST FOR EDUCATIONAL RECORDS — DoDEA
Full name of student
Name used during school attendance
Date of birth
Dates of attendance
Description of the records requested
Identity and location of school
Name of requesting party
Address of requesting party
Signature of requesting party

Note: Include a certified copy of the child's birth certificate, adoption decree, guardianship order, divorce decree, and custody order, as appropriate. Also needed, when records are requested by the non-custodial parent, is a signed statement by the custodial parent (and the child, if age 18 or over), granting the non-custodial parent access to the child's records.

NORTH CAROLINA
COUNTY OF BUCKINGHAM

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE
DISTRICT COURT DIVISION
FILE NO. 08 CV 223

ROGER K. BAIRD, JR.,
Plaintiff

v.
NANCY L. BAIRD,
Defendant

MOTION FOR NAVY RECORDS

Plaintiff hereby moves this court pursuant to NCGS. §1A and Rule 45 of the Rules of Civil Procedure for an order granting a subpoena directed to the United States Navy for the production of documents, as further explained below. The Plaintiff shows the court that:

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff is an officer in the U.S. Navy, currently stationed in Japan and the Defendant is a Navy officer, currently stationed in Florida. The parties were married to each other on April 12, 1997 and subsequently separated from each other on October 9, 2008. There are two minor children born during the parties' marriage: Ellen G. Baird, born August 2, 2001 and Lewis R. Baird, born April 19, 2003.

On November 3, 2008, Plaintiff filed his Complaint seeking, inter alia, child custody.

DISCOVERY REQUESTS FROM BOTH PARTIES

Both parties have asked for all documentation that the other party has related to a disciplinary hearing involving the conduct of a certain Commander John Q. Doe in December 2008. Mr. Doe is the former commander of the Navy's Far East Intelligence Group, based at Naval Air Facility Watusi in Japan. Upon information and belief, Defendant had an extramarital affair with Mr. Doe, this conduct destroyed the Baird marriage, it also destroyed Mr. Doe's career and it had an impact on the care and custody of the minor children.

Plaintiff, in discovery, has requested that Defendant admit this affair and explain the consequences that her behavior with Mr. Doe had on the family, including the effects on the minor children.

Then-Commander Doe was relieved of his duty as commander of the Group on December 23, 2008. He received nonjudicial punishment, referred to as "Admiral's Mast," as a direct result of his committing adultery with the wife of a fellow officer.

The parties both seek to obtain from each other all documentation about these proceedings in December 2008. Both parties have demanded, through their attorneys, to review this documentation.

RELEVANCE TO THE CASE

The Plaintiff, by way of discovery, has requested that Defendant both admit the affair and explain specific details from Defendant as to the nature of her relationship with Mr. Doe, its duration, its impact on the minor children, her absence from the children while she was with Mr. Doe, and other information.

The information in Mr. Doe's case file associated with the administrative action taken in December 2008, will tend to show that Mr. John P. Doe did, in fact, have an extramarital affair with the Defendant. It will also show the nature, frequency and duration of the Defendant's conduct with Mr. Doe, which directly correlates to her absences from the family, her distraction from parental duties, and her sense of priorities as to the children's care by Plaintiff, Mr. Doe's career and her own marriage. The Plaintiff is entitled to find out from the Navy's case files the details of the Defendant's actions with Mr. Doe so as to present evidence to the court on the children being left alone while Defendant was away with Mr. Doe.

The case file will show documents, e-mails, and witness statements regarding the lapses of time in which Defendant left the minor children to be with Mr. Doe, and the times when Plaintiff had to step in to care for the minor children while Defendant was absent. The court will need to inquire into the consequences and effects on the minor children when dealing with separate families as a result of Defendant's conduct.

The case file will also assist in impeaching Defendant on her sworn statements if she denies that she had an affair, is untruthful as to its nature or duration, denies that her behavior had an impact on the children or claims that her conduct never resulted in their being left alone, with no supervision.

PROCEDURES FOR OBTAINING NAVY RECORDS

The United States Navy, pursuant to its publication, SECNAVINST 5820.8A, Enclosures (3) and (4), describes the proper procedure for obtaining Navy records. The Secretary of the Navy's sole delegate for service of process is the General Counsel of the Navy, who must be served with a subpoena by certified mail or Federal Express at the following address: General Counsel of the Navy, Navy Litigation Office, 720 Kennon Street SE, Bldg 36 Room 233, Washington Navy Yard, DC 20374-5013. The office of the General Counsel of the Navy will subsequently forward the matter to the proper determining authorities for action.

In addition to a subpoena requesting specified Navy records, a detailed written request must be submitted to the appropriate determining authority to assure an informed and timely evaluation of the request. The outline of information to be provided is included in Enclosure (4) of SECNAVINST 5820.8A. Additionally, counsel for the Plaintiff has prepared this detailed written request to accompany the court's subpoena to the General Counsel of the Navy and it is included with this motion.

The subpoena in this case should request the following:

- The Navy's internal investigation of the alleged inappropriate relationship between John P. Doe and
- Nancy L. Baird, in Japan, Okinawa, and elsewhere during and before December 2008 including witness statements, e-mails; and

- Navy's record of administrative, punitive, nonjudicial or other action against Commander Doe.

WHEREFORE the Plaintiff prays that this Court:

Sign a subpoena (copy attached hereto) for production of the United States Navy's disciplinary and investigative files for Commander John P. Doe.

Grant such other relief for Plaintiff as is just and proper.

Fact Sheet – VA Payments and Family Support

by Mark E. Sullivan, Esq.

Q. Are VA benefits subject to levy, seizure or attachment?

A. In general, the answer is no. Under 38 USC §5301(a)(1), benefits paid by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) are not subject to levy, seizure or attachment. "However," adds Steve Shewmaker, a Georgia lawyer who is also an Army Reserve JAG lieutenant colonel, "...the general rule is that they are available for consideration by the court in deciding matters of family support. Levy, seizure or attachment refers to collection of debts; the courts interpreting this have consistently stated that this does not mean the duty of support for a family."

Q. Do the cases on "family support" include alimony as an exception to 38 USC §5301(a)(1)?

A. Yes – alimony (also known as spousal support or maintenance) is one of the exceptions. A useful example would be a 1994 Iowa case involving an appeal from an alimony decision. The husband's main source of income was a VA disability check of $1,548 per month. It was based on a disability rating of 100 percent. In that case, In re Marriage of Anderson, 522 N.W.2d 99, 101–102 (Iowa App. 1994), the state Court of Appeals recognized this "family support exception" to 38 USC. §5301(a)(1):

The issue raised by the appellant has been answered by the United States Supreme Court in the case of Rose v. Rose, 481 U.S. 619, 107 S. Ct. 2029, 95 L. Ed. 2d 599 (1987). The Rose case involved nonpayment of child support as opposed to nonpayment of alimony. However, both are viewed as familial support by the United States Supreme Court in Rose. 481 U.S. at 631–32, 107 S. Ct. at 2037, 95 L. Ed. 2d at 611. The Rose case involved a disabled veteran whose sole means of support was his VA checks. The state court held him in contempt for failure to pay child support. The U.S. Supreme Court held a state court has jurisdiction to hold a disabled veteran in contempt for failing to pay child support, even if the veteran's only means of satisfying his obligation is to use veteran's benefits received as compensation for a service connected disability. 481 U.S. at 619, 107 S. Ct. at 2030, 95 L. Ed. 2d at 604. The court held:

> Neither the Veteran's Benefits provisions of Title 38 nor the

VA Payments

> garnishment provisions of the Child Support Enforcement Act of Title 42 indicate unequivocally that a veteran's disability benefits are provided solely for that veteran's support. We hold, therefore, that as enacted, these federal statues were not in conflict with and thus did not preempt § 36–820 (the Tennessee child support statute). Nor did the circuit court's efforts to enforce its order of child support by holding appellant in contempt transgress the congressional intent behind the federal statutes. 481 U.S. at 636, 107 S. Ct. at 2039, 95 L. Ed. 2d at 614.

Q. Are there cases in other states which also say this?

A. Yes. In a 1984 Louisiana Court of Appeals case, the trial court found that the husband, Mr. Collins, had virtually no source of income other than his VA benefits. The husband argued that VA benefits are exempt from awards of temporary alimony ("alimony pendente lite") under the anti-attachment wording in Title 38. The court of Appeals stated:

> Mr. Collins was obliged to, and did support Mrs. Collins out of his Veterans' benefits during the time they lived together. His obligation to support her out of whatever income and assets are available to him continues until their marriage is dissolved by divorce.
> An award of alimony pendente lite is not an "attachment, levy, or seizure" as contemplated in 38 USCA § 3101(a) [the previous number for this section of Title 38]...
> The provisions of 38 USCA § 3101(a) do not apply to awards of alimony pendente lite. The duty to pay alimony pendente lite does not arise as the result of the judicial process. An award of alimony pendente lite is the legal enforcement of a marital duty rather than a process for the collection of a debt. If no other income is available for the purpose, Mr. Collins must use his Veterans' benefits for the support of Mrs. Collins when she "has not a sufficient income for maintenance pending suit." La.C.C. Art. 148. The trial judge erred in discontinuing the previous award of alimony pendente lite.

Collins v. Collins, 458 So.2d 1008 (La. App. 1984)

In a 1990 Maryland case, the Court of Special Appeals said:

> Neither [the McCarty nor the Mansell case] purported even to suggest that... disability benefits actually received by a veteran cannot be counted as income to the veteran for purposes of determining his or her ability to pay alimony.
> The law generally is that such benefits may be considered as a resource for purposes of setting the amount of alimony and that doing so does not constitute an affront to the Federal anti-attachment and anti-alienation provisions, such as 38 USC § 3101 and 42 USC § 662(f)(2) protecting those benefits from the claims of creditors.... We find those cases persuasive and therefore hold that the VA disability benefits received by Dr. Riley may be considered as a resource for purposes of determining his ability to pay alimony. Accordingly, we reject his legal challenge to the order denying his motion to terminate or reduce alimony. Riley v. Riley, 82 Md. App. 400, 409-10, 571 A.2d 1261 (1990).

The Vermont Supreme Court stated in a 1987 case:

> 38 USC. § 3101(a) protects recipients of disability benefits from the claims of creditors and provides security to the recipient's family and dependents.... Section 3101(a) does not apply in the present case, however, since a wife seeking spousal maintenance is not a "creditor" under the statute. Id. Veterans' disability benefits may be considered for alimony or spousal maintenance payments.... Further, the instant proceeding is not litigation in which the wife seeks to attach, levy or seize plaintiff's veteran benefits.... While 38 USC § 3101(a) would preclude an assignment or apportionment of plaintiff's veteran disability benefits, it does not preclude consideration of disability benefits by a trial court as a source of income upon which an award of alimony may be based.

Repash v. Repash, 148 Vt. 70, 528 A.2d 744 (1987)

Q. Are there any other cases which support this?

A. Yes. Many other cases confirm this rule of law in the context of spousal support. Some of these are:

- Alabama – Mims v. Mims, 442 So.2d 102 (Ala. Civ. App. 1983) Arkansas – Womack v. Womack, 307 Ark. 269, 818 S.W.2d 958 (1991); Murphy v. Murphy, 302 Ark. 157, 787 S.W.2d 684 (1990) Colorado – In re Marriage of Nevil, 809 P.2d 1122 (Colo. App. 1991) Mississippi – Hollis v. Bryan, 166 Miss. 874, 143 So. 687 (1932) Montana – In re Marriage of Strong, 300 Mont. 331, 8 P.3d 763 (Mont. 2000)

- Nebraska – Ray v. Ray, 222 Neb. 324, 383 N.W.2d 752 (1986); Pyke v. Pyke, 212 Neb. 114, 321 N.W.2d 906 (1982)
- Oregon – Matter of Marriage of Tribbles, 63 Or. App. 774, 665 P.2d 1267 (1983); Gerold v. Gerold, 6 Or. App. 353, 488 P.2d 294 (1971) Pennsylvania – Parker v. Parker, 335 Pa. Super 348, 484 A.2d 168 Virginia – Lambert v. Lambert, 10 Va. App. 623, 627, 395 S.E.2d 207 (1990)

- Wisconsin; In re Marriage of Kraft, 119 Wn.2d 438, 832 P.2d 871 (1992) Weberg v. Weberg, 158 Wis. 2d 540, 463 N.W.2d 382 (Wis. App. 1990); In re Gardner, 220 Wis. 493, 264 N.W. 643 (1936)

Q. Does that mean that veterans' benefits can also be divided at divorce in "property division"?

A. No. The law is clear on that, and congress has spoken. The Uniformed Services Former Spouses' Protection Act clearly says that VA disability compensation payments under Title 38 of the U.S. Code are not subject to property division upon divorce. The same is true to a large extent with military disability retirement payments under Title 10, Chapter 61 of the U.S. Code.

Q. Has the U.S. Supreme Court also spoken?

A. Yes. The case is Mansell v. Mansell, 490 U.S. 581 (1989). The Mansell case involved a California court decree which divided a military retiree's disability benefits as part of the property settlement, not as alimony or spousal support. In the Mansell decision, the court held that federal law does not permit state courts to divide or partition disability benefits as community or marital property upon divorce. It also prohibits the treatment of a waiver of military retired pay (to obtain VA payments) as marital or community property.

Q. How are the courts handling support cases with VA disability elections before and after the divorce?

A. Alexander R. Rhoads, an Iowa family law practitioner, states the rules this way:

> Congress has never passed a law stating that veterans' benefits may not be considered with respect to spousal support. Nor has the U.S. Supreme Court ever held that VA benefits cannot be considered in this manner.

Where the disability benefits are elected before the divorce, disability benefits are income for purposes of support. See Womack v. Womack, 307 Ark. 269, 818

S.W.2d 958 (1991); In re Marriage of Bahr, 29 Kan. App. 2d 846, 32 P.3d 1212 (2001); Riley v. Riley, 82 Md. App. 400, 571 A.2d 1261 (1990); Weberg v. Weberg, 158 Wis. 2d 540, 463 N.W.2d 382 (Ct. App. 1990).

Where disability has not been elected at divorce, but an election is pending or otherwise seems likely, the court may make a nominal award or otherwise reserve jurisdiction to make an award of support after the election is final. See Collins v. Collins, 144 Md. App. 395, 798 A.2d 1155 (2002) and Longo v. Longo, 266 Neb. 171, 663 N.W.2d 604 (2003) ($1 per year permanent alimony award).

Where disability is elected after the divorce, the election of disability is a sufficient change of circumstance to permit an increase in alimony. See Ashley v. Ashley, 337 Ark. 362, 990 S.W.2d 507 (1999); Kramer v. Kramer, 252 Neb. 526, 567 N.W.2d 100 (1997); In re Marriage of Murphy, 151 Or. App. 649,950 P.2d 377 (1997); In re Marriage of Jennings, 138 Wash. 2d 612, 980 P.2d 1248 (1999).

Where the trial court originally awarded non-modifiable alimony, and the husband thereafter elected disability benefits, an Ohio court held that it was error not to reopen the judgment to make the alimony modifiable on the ground that the original judgment was no longer equitable. Schaefferkoetter v. Schaefferkoetter, 2003 WL 22359725 (Ohio Ct. App. 2003).

Q. So far the cases have only dealt with alimony. What about child support?

A. Child support may also be awarded based on disability payments to either parent being considered as income. Laura Wish Morgan notes the following cases to support this rule in her treatise, Child Support Guidelines:

Interpretation and Application –

Loving v. Sterling, 680 A.2d 1030 (D.C. 1996) (federal law does not prohibit treating child support obligor's veterans administration disability benefits as income under support guidelines); In re Paternity of C.L.H., 689 N.E.2d 456 (Ind. Ct. App. 1997) (full amount of veteran's disability benefit was income under guidelines); In re Marriage of Lee, 486 N.W.2d 302 (Iowa 1991) (veterans' disability benefits, Social Security benefits, retirement benefits, and workers' compensation benefits are includable in income); In re Marriage of Benson, 495 N.W.2d 777 (Iowa Ct. App. 1992) (veterans' disability, Social Security disability, workers' compensation, retirement income, are all to be considered income for support); Riley v. Riley, 82 Md. App. 400, 571 A.2d 1261 (1990) (military disability is income); In re Marriage of Strong, 8 P.3d 763 (Mont. 2000); Fox v. Fox, 592 N.W.2d 541 (N.D. 1999); Dye v. White, 976 P.2d 1086 (Okla. Ct. App. 1999); Wingard v. Wingard, 11 D. & C. 4th 343 (Pa. Ct. Com. Pl.), aff'd, (1987); Weberg v. Weberg, 158 Wis. 2d 540, 463 N.W.2d 382 (Ct. App. 1990) (military disability pension is income).

Laura Wish Morgan, Child Support Guidelines: Interpretation and Application (1996, Supp. 2009)

Q. How do the courts explain the rule which allows VA benefits to be used in setting family support?

A.The Montana Supreme Court explained the law as follows in In re Marriage of Strong, 300 Mont. 33, 342, 8 P.3d 763, 769-770 (Mont. 2000):

> Should the court's new property distribution appear inadequate to provide for Brandy's "reasonable needs" post-dissolution, then the District Court may consider awarding Brandy spousal maintenance under § 40-4-203, MCA, in lieu of or in addition to what marital property the court may legally apportion to her. Even though Justin's VA disability benefits are his sole current source of income and, thus, would necessarily be used to satisfy his maintenance obligations, such action is permitted under the logic of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Rose v. Rose (1987), 481 U.S. 619, 107 S.Ct. 2029, 95 L.Ed.2d 599.

In Rose, the Tennessee trial court held the veteran spouse in contempt for failing to pay ordered child support. The veteran challenged that action on appeal, arguing that it was impermissible since his income was composed almost entirely of disability benefits received from the VA. See Rose, 481 U.S. at 622, 107 S.Ct. at 2032, 95 L.Ed.2d at 605 (noting that the veteran also received nominal monthly disability income from the Social Security Administration). After reviewing the legislative history applicable to what is now 38 USC § 5301(a) (formerly 38 USC § 3101(a)), the court held that VA disability benefits were never intended to be exclusively for the subsistence of the beneficiary. Rather, congress intended such benefits to support not only the veteran, but the veteran's family as well. Recognizing an exception to the application of [§ 5301(a)'s] prohibition against attachment, levy, or seizure in this context would further, not undermine, the federal purpose in providing these benefits.

Rose, 481 U.S. at 634, 107 S.Ct. at 2038, 95 L.Ed.2d at 613. The court thus held that the "[n]either the Veterans' Benefits provisions of Title 38 nor the garnishment provisions of the Child Enforcement Act of Title 42" preempt the authority of state courts to enforce a child support order against a veteran, even where the veteran's income is composed of VA disability benefits that would necessarily be used to pay child support. See Rose, 481 U.S. at 636, 107 S.Ct. at 2039, 95 L.Ed.2d at 614.

Under the logic of Rose, since "Congress clearly intended veterans' disability benefits to be used, in part, for the support of veterans' dependents," Rose, 481 U.S. at 631, 107 S.Ct. at 2036, 95 L.Ed.2d at 610-11, "a state court is clearly free to consider post-[dissolution] disability income and order a disabled veteran to pay spousal support even where disability benefits will be used to make such payments." Clauson, 831 P.2d at 1263 n.9. In addition to Alaska, several other jurisdictions have concluded that federal law does not prohibit considering veterans' disability pay as a source of income in awarding spousal maintenance. See In re Marriage of Kraft (Wash. 1992), 832 P.2d 871; Womack v. Womack (Ark. 1991), 818 S.W.2d 958; In re Marriage of Nevil (Colo. Ct. App. 1991), 809 P.2d 1122; Riley v. Riley (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1990), 571 A.2d 1261; Lambert v. Lambert (Va. Ct. App. 1990), 395 S.E.2d 207; Weberg v. Weberg (Wis. Ct. App. 1990), 463 N.W.2d 382.

Q. What about apportionment?

In addition to Alaska, several other jurisdictions have concluded that federal law does not prohibit considering veterans' disability pay as a source of income in awarding spousal maintenance.

Isn't that the method that must be used to decide the amount of family support which a veteran must pay and the means to transfer that to the child or children?

A. No. This issue was covered in the Rose decision. The Supreme Court found no evidence that congress intended this to be the exclusive means of setting family support or enforcing it, and stated that the VA regulations bear this out:

> Nowhere do the regulations specify that only the Administrator may define the child support obligation of a disabled veteran in the first instance. To the contrary, appellant, joined by the United States as amicus curiae, concedes that a state court may consider disability benefits as part of the veteran's income in setting the amount of child support to be paid.

The court stated that:

The statute simply provides that disability benefits "may . . . be apportioned as may be prescribed by the Administrator." 38 USC § 3107(a)(2). The regulations broadly authorize apportionment if "the veteran is not reasonably discharging his or her responsibility for the . . . children's support." 38 CFR § 3.450 (a)(1)(ii) (1986).

The Supreme Court went on to say:

> In none of these provisions is there an express indication that the Administrator possesses exclusive authority to order payment of disability benefits as child support. Nor is it clear that Congress envisioned the Administrator making independent child support determinations in conflict with existing state-court orders. The statute gives no hint that exercise of the Administrator's discretion may have this effect.

Q. Can a court garnish the benefits of a veteran for child support or alimony?

A. Generally speaking, the answer is no. However, Congress enacted an exception in the case of a military retiree who has waived pension payments (in whole or part) to receive VA benefits. It is found at 42 USC § 662(f)(2). In U.S. v. Murray, the Georgia Court of Appeals reviewed a case brought by the ex-wife of a veteran who sought to garnish the veteran's VA disability compensation for alimony. The court held that VA disability payments are subject to garnishment for alimony to the extent that they replace "waived retired pay." U.S. v. Murray, 158 Ga. App. 781, 282 S.E.2d 372 (1981).

Q. Does the tax-free status of VA disability compensation mean that it cannot be considered in determining support?

A. "No," says Jim Higdon, a retired Navy Reserve captain who practices in Texas. "There is no exemption for payments which are tax-free. They are counted as all other sources of money (except for means-tested benefits) in computing the income of the individual who is to pay support, even though they are not subject to income tax. Other military payments which are tax–free but are generally counted in determining support are the basic allowance for housing (BAH) and the basic allowance for subsistence (BAS). Pay and allowances in general are exempt from taxation when the service member is in a combat zone, yet they are also subject to consideration in calculating alimony and child support. Since such payments are tax-free, the entire amount should be considered."

Q. Are VA benefits exempted from consideration as "income" in setting child support because they are "means-tested payments"?

A. "Since they are not means-tested payments in the first place," responds John Camp of Warner Robins, Georgia, a family lawyer and a retired Air Force Staff Judge Advocate, "the answer is no." Camp continues, "Means-tested refers to payments which depend on a person's having little or no money. The individual is "tested" as to his means of support; if it falls below a certain level, then benefits are paid. While that is true for VA pensions, it does not apply to VA disability compensation. For the latter, the wealth or poverty of the recipient doesn't matter, nor does one's previous rank. If John Smith has a service-connected disability and applies for VA disability compensation, the payments will be made by the Department of Veterans Affairs without regard to whether he is rich and was formerly an admiral, or whether he is poor and used to be a corporal. The monthly amount doesn't vary due to these factors."

Nevada Strikes Out on Alimony

By Bruce I. Shapiro, Esq

1. INTRODUCTION

What does the determination of alimony have to do with salaries in Major League Baseball? Nothing, but perhaps it should. The determination of alimony in divorces is arbitrary, inconsistent and fails most litigants. Other than child custody, the award of alimony in many cases has the most dramatic consequences to people's lives.

Child support involves minimal conflict because of NRS 125B that imposes a presumptive amount of child support based on the gross income of the payor parent. Under NRS 125.150, community property must be divided equally absent a compelling reason. Then, there is alimony. There is no generally accepted formula for an alimony award. The Nevada Supreme Court has implicitly discouraged the use of formula for alimony through child support cases.[1] Every judge views alimony differently and each judge's award can be drastically different. The same judge, with similar facts, on a different day, could award a different alimony award. How does this serve anyone's best interests? With 20 different family court judges, it is difficult for even the seasoned divorce lawyer to advise his or her client as to what alimony will be. When negotiating alimony, counsel have no clear guidelines. When you take an alimony issue to trial, you are playing Russian roulette.

2. WHAT IS ALIMONY?

Although there is no specific legal standard for temporary support, it is sometimes more predictable and consistent than post-divorce orders because the standard is different. In Nevada, all income acquired during marriage is community. "The wages of either spouse during marriage are considered to be community funds regardless of which spouse earns the greater income or which spouse supports the community." Norwest Financial v. Lawver, 109 Nev. 242, 246, 849 P.2d 324 (1993). NRS 125.150(1)(b) mandates that the court "[s]hall, to the extent practicable, make an equal disposition of the property of the parties . .. ." In other words, earnings during marriage are community. The court should therefore have some obligation to equally divide the community income pending a divorce.

The Nevada Supreme Court has recognized two general forms of alimony. The first "...is a form of alimony a court may award in order to satisfy the demands of justice and equity. A second type of alimony (rehabilitative alimony) is that provided by the legislature under NRS 125.150(8) which is designed to provide necessary training or education 'relating to a job, career or profession.'" Gardner v. Gardner, 110 Nev. 1053, 1057, 881 P.2d 645 (1994). A case by case analysis will determine the appropriate amount and length of any alimony award. Gardner, 100 Nev. at 1056-58, 881 P.2d 647-48; Rutar v. Rutar, 108 Nev. 203, 206-08, 827 P.2d 829, 831-33 (1992). Alimony is an equitable award serving to meet the post-divorce needs and rights of the former spouse. Cf. Gardner v. Gardner, 100 Nev. 1053, 881 P.2d 645, 647 (1994). It follows from the Nevada Supreme Court decisions in this area that two of the primary purposes of alimony, at least in marriages of significant length, are to narrow any large gaps between the post-divorce earning capacities of the parties, and to allow the recipient spouse to live "as nearly as fairly possible to the station in life they enjoyed before the divorce." Sprenger at 860.

The court must award alimony as appears "'just and equitable,' having regard to the conditions in which the parties will be left in by the divorce." Sprenger v. Sprenger, 110 Nev. 855, 859, 878 P.2d 284 (1994), citing NRS 125.150(1)(a). In Sprenger, the court cited seven factors that should be used in determining an alimony award in a divorce case:

> (1) the wife's career prior to marriage;
> (2) the length of the marriage;
> (3) the husband's education during the marriage;
> (4) the wife's marketability;
> (5) the wife's ability to support herself;
> (6) whether the wife stayed home with the children; and
> (7) the wife's award, besides child support and alimony.[3]

So what does this laundry list of factors actually mean? In Sprenger, the district court awarded the wife $1,500 per month alimony for two years. Sprenger at 858. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court's award, finding that based on the relevant factors, the district court's alimony award was an abuse of discretion. The Supreme Court then remanded the case to the district court to "both increase and extend [the] alimony award such that [wife] is able to live 'as nearly as fairly possible to the station in life she enjoyed before the divorce,' for the rest of her life or her financial circumstances substantially improve." Sprenger at 860, citing Heim v. Heim, 104 Nev. 605, 612-13, 763 P.2d 678, 683 (1988).

In Gardner, the parties had been married for 27 years and had no children. The husband earned $75,000 per year and the wife earned $43,000 per year. Gardner at 1055. The district court awarded the wife $1,300 per month alimony for the first year and $1,000 per month for the second year. Gardner at 1055. Considering all of the relevant factors, the Supreme Court attempted to achieve "income parity" between the parties by increasing "the length of [the] alimony award by an additional 10 years, at the rate of $1,000 per month." Gardner at 1058-1059.

As it did in the above cases, the Nevada Supreme Court, in Alba v. Alba, 111 Nev. 426, 892 P.2d 574 (1995), equalized the parties' income for a reasonable period. Alba involved a marriage of only seven years. Alba at 426. Husband earned $35,000 per year, less $6,000 paid in child support, and wife earned $20,400 per year, and $6,000 per year received in child support. Therefore, husband had an adjusted income of approximately $29,000 per year and wife had an adjusted income of $26,400 per year. The Nevada Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's award of $1,000 per month alimony to the wife for three years. Alba at 428. The alimony was affirmed because the earning potential of the husband was "higher" than that of the wife. Alba at 428.

In Wright v. Osburn, 114 Nev. 1367, 970 P.2d 1071 (1998), the husband's income was $62,124 per year, and the wife's income was $19,200 per year. The Nevada Supreme Court reversed the lower court's award of $500 per month for five years and remanded the case for an award that was "fair and equitable," having regard to the conditions in which the parties will be left by the divorce, noting that "it appears very unlikely that in five years, [the wife] will be able to earn an income that will enable her to either maintain the lifestyle she enjoyed during the marriage or a lifestyle commensurate with, although not necessarily equal to, that of [the husband]." The amount and length of alimony are to be determined by "the individual circumstances of each case," although the district court was not required to award alimony "so as to effectively equalize salaries." Shydler v. Shydler, 114 Nev. 192, 954 P.2d 37 (1998). It is apparent from Wright and Shydler that that while "equalization of incomes" is not the goal of an alimony award, the district court should make an attempt to "close the gap" of the parties' standard of living for some period after the divorce.

3. DO WE NEED GUIDELINES?

The simple answer is yes, we need something. The district court awards of alimony are often inadequate. It should be noted that there has never been a published Nevada Supreme Court decision that reversed a trial court for awarding too much alimony. All reversals have been due to the district court failing to award sufficient alimony.

It is not being argued that the court should necessarily equalize incomes. The superior earning capacity of one spouse may have nothing to do with the community contributions of the other spouse. In most cases there is a need for alimony, but the ability to pay is limited. The standard of living usually cannot be maintained after divorce because the same income will be supporting two homes instead of one. Further, it is not argued that marriage itself, without any other factors, entitles a spouse to any post-divorce alimony. There must, however, be more guidance.

The child support enforcement amendments of 1984 required all states to develop advisory mathematical guidelines to calculate child support awards.[4] As a result, in 1987 the Nevada legislature enacted NRS 125B.070 and NRS 125B.080, which created a rebuttable presumption that the guidelines represent the proper child support award and that a deviation from the guidelines will be allowed only upon a written finding that the application of the guidelines would result in an unjust or inappropriate mathematical award. These child support guidelines were developed because the child support awards being made prior to enactment of the formulas were found to be severely deficient when compared to the actual economic costs of rearing children. Orders resulted in inconsistent awards and caused inequitable treatment of parties in similarly situated cases and inefficient adjudication of child support awards in the absence of uniform standards.[5] Judicial discretion, unassisted by the presumptive guidelines, often resulted in severely deficient child support awards.[6] The same is true of alimony and has been acknowledged by the Nevada Supreme Court when it stated that "the legislature has failed to set forth an objective standard for determining the appropriate amount. Absent such a standard, there appears to be a disparity in the awards for spousal support on similar facts even greater than for child support." [7]

The child support formula scheme enacted by the Nevada legislature in 1987, and the case law that has followed, has alleviated many of the problems in inconsistent and inadequate child support awards. The same is needed for alimony. There does not seem to be much support for specific guidelines similar to the child support guidelines. Perhaps this is because some lawyers believe they benefit from the chaos and lack of predictability. Some type of general guidelines, however, are needed to alleviate some of the vast inconsistencies amongst judicial departments.

4. NO INCENTIVE TO BE REASONABLE

In many cases, the financially disadvantaged spouse does not have any incentive to negotiate a reasonable alimony award early in the case. Since temporary support cannot be credited toward post-divorce alimony, the financially disadvantaged spouse has an incentive to receive this "free," temporary support for as long as possible before negotiating a resolution. Conversely, once the matter nears trial, the financially advantaged spouse is ready to take his or her chances at trial. Even when nearing trial, the uncertainly of "Russian Roulette" often does not provide adequate incentive for either party to negotiate a reasonable alimony award.

NRS 125.141 offer of judgment statute for family court specifically excludes alimony. This is one of the problems. Why is there a reluctance to punish a spouse who is either being unreasonable in asking for too much or offering too little in alimony? If one party is clearly being unreasonable with respect to alimony and causes the matter to go to trial, there should be a consequence. Now, alimony is negotiated like the sale of a used car. The "buyer" asks for an unreasonable amount of alimony so he or she has "room" to negotiate. Same with the "seller," or payor. Neither party wants to give up too much in their negotiating power so the negotiations often have no relation to the facts of the case. These unreasonable positions carry over to trial and the court often finds both parties' positions to be unreasonable and orders alimony somewhere in the middle. "Splitting the baby" in turn encourages both parties to be unreasonable so that the "middle" is closer to their request.

This brings us to salary arbitration in Major League Baseball. In the Major League Baseball salary arbitration process, each party submits a salary request to the arbitrator, along with their position as to why their request is appropriate. Rather than "splitting the baby" by finding a salary in the middle, which again provides incentive for both parties to exaggerate their requests, the arbitrator must pick one or the other. The arbitrator is forced to pick the most reasonable of the two submissions, thereby forcing both parties to be more reasonable. Instead of going for the "home run," there is incentive to simply get a base hit, rather than risk striking out.

A similar concept could work with alimony. By requiring the court to choose one proposal or the other, it forces both parties to be more reasonable in their requests. There could be an "out" for the judge if both proposals are so unreasonable that in good conscience the court could pick neither, but in that case, I would propose that there is a requirement that the "more" reasonable party must be awarded his or her attorney's fees. Unless it is mandatory, the family court judges in Clark County simply will not award attorney's fees for alimony claims.

5. CONCLUSION

Absent guidelines or the ability of the judges to be more consistent in their alimony awards, alternatives must be explored. Absent a formula or guidelines, using baseball style arbitration is certainly a possibility. Too many litigants are striking out when it comes to alimony and too many judges simply miss the call. It's time to "Play ball" with alimony.
